REMARKS

Claim 32 was originally filed November 15, 2005. There was never any intention on the part of Applicant to amend that claim. However, in the Status of Claims filed with the amendment dated July 18, 2006 the following crucial language was inadvertently omitted from Claim 32:

"...through the same transfer location...".

That wordage has since been restored to claim 32.

Target Market: The target market for this invention is people who wish to be creative in writing or composing information, and who want to speed up their work with the aid of modern technology, but do not want to substitute the thinking of a machine for their own thinking.

The Invention: Merging the optimum ease of operation with minimum eye strain and effort.

Crucial Claim Language from Claim 32:

"...known transfer location while visibly displaying each of them there..."

"...manually adjusting ... the dwell time..."

"...after adjustment...through the same transfer location ...".

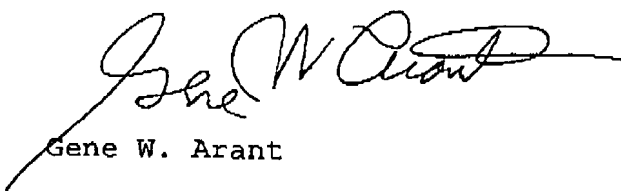

With allowance of Claims 17-23 the Examiner has already acknowledged that an invention is present. It is believed that cancellation of Claims 33, 34 and the present clarification of Claim 32 now brings this application into condition for allowance.

Respectfully submitted,

July 12, 2007
